TUESDAY, JUNE 7. 1737

NUMB. 610

No. 608.

Yesterday arrived a Mail from Holland, with the following Extract of Lord Theodore's Manifesto, in answer to the Edict issued at Genoa the 9th of May, 1736, whereby the Senate declared him Author of the late Troubles in Corsica, a Seducer of the People, a Disturber of the publick Peace, and as such, guilty of the Crime of Læſe Maſteſtatis.

THEODORE begins with saying, 'That he looks upon the Inveſtives in the ſaid Edict, as impotent Clamours, to which he ſhall make no other Answer at preſent, than that 'tis ſufficient for him, that the Corſicans have thought him worthy of the Crown and Sceptre of that Kingdom; and that he reſerves it to himſelf, to prove the Nobility of his Extraction, when with the divine Aſſiſtance, and by the Valour of the Corſicans, he has reſcued the Diadem of the ſaid Kingdom from the Genoefe.'

As to the Reproach caſt upon him with regard to the Meaneſs of his Fortune, and to his Arrival in Corſica with little Ammunition and Money, and the carrying four Mahometans with him thither, he makes Answer, 'That 'tis with that handful of Ammunition and Money, that he has ranſom'd the Liberty of a Kingdom reduced to Slavery, and that he has the Glory of having taken a Crown from the Genoefe, which they only poſſeſs'd, ſays he, by the mere Favour of the Corſicans, and at the Expence of the Holy See.' Upon this Occaſion he quotes the Letter of Pope Boniface VIII. dated May 12, 1303, and the fulminating Bull of Pope Eugene IV. dated Nov. 12, 1444. As to the four Barbarians or Mahometans, he is reproach'd with having carried along with him, which by the way he does not own, he ſays, 'That even tho' he had done ſo, he ſhould not have done it with a Deſign to plunder both Friends and Enemies, as he pretends the Genoefe did heretofore.' After this, he gives a ſhort Detail of what paſſed in 1272, in 1317, and in 1373. wherein he reproaches the Genoefe for having furniſhed the Mahometans with Proviſions, joined their Gallies, and even ſent for them into Europe.

If the Genoefe, continues he, had the Tranquillity of the Kingdom really at Heart, as they pretend they have, they wou'd not have oppreſſed it, and reduced it to the laſt Degree of Deſpair; they wou'd not, in Breach of their Faith, have put ſo many innocent Perſons to Death; and in the laſt Place, they wou'd not have violated the Treaty made under the Guarantee of his Imperial Maſteſty. They pretend to be the natural Sovereigns of the Kingdom, and that the Corſicans are their Subjects, but they in Fact are not, and if they were, 'tis juſtifiable to retaliate one Breach of Faith with another.'

After this he ridicules the Reproach caſt upon him of being the Author of the late Troubles, a Seducer of the People, a Diſturber of the publick Tranquillity, and guilty of the Crime of Læſe Maſteſtatis. 'Tis none of his Fault, ſays he, that the Troubles of the Kingdom commenced in 1730; 'twas rather their bad Government, which excited the Troubles and wearied out the Patience of the People, ſo far as to oblige them to ſhake off the Yoke, eſpecially when they ſaw that the Genoefe annu'd the late Conventions in Contempt of the Emperor's Guarantee. He declares, 'That he came to Corſica with no other Intent, than to aſſiſt the Oppreſſed, and reſcue them from Slavery, that he is not at all diſturbed at the Edict of the Genoefe, and that were he even ſuch a Perſon as it wou'd inſinuate, the divine Providence wou'd, in that Caſe, but do the ſame thing as it did heretofore in Favour of the Iſraelites and other Peoples, by raiſing them up Deliverers from whom they had no Reaſon at firſt to expect that great Succeſs which they afterwards ſaw.'

Finally, by virtue of the Power which the People have given him, he declares, 'The Genoefe baniſhed from Corſica, on Pain of Death, Debtors to the Treafury of the Kingdom, for the Revenues which they have enjoy'd, &c. &c.'

Letters from Vienna ſay, that on the 19th ult.

O. S. the Emperor, in a ſolemn Manner, declared the Duke of Lorain Generaliſſimo of his Army in Hungary, and he was preparing to ſet out to put himſelf at the Head of the Troops. The Velt Marſhals Kevenhuller and Seckendorf, are actually ſet out for the Camp of Semlin, as is the Prince of Saxe Hilburghauſen, for the Camp he is to command on the Frontiers of Boſnia. The Chancery of the War is alſo ſet out for Hungary, whither they are continually ſending all ſorts of Proviſion, Ammunition, and Implements of War; and as ſoon as all the Generals are arrived at their reſpective Poſts, the military Operations will be begun. Who will command the Turks Army is not known, tho' ſome Advices from Conſtantinople ſay, 'twill be the Count de Bonneval. They have, contrary to their Cuſtom, caſt up Intrenchments, and raiſed ſeveral Forts before Widin, which are mann'd by choſen Troops. The Garriſon of that Place conſiſts of 16,000 Men, of which Number 9000 are Janiſſaries, and the Place is provided with all Neceſſaries for a long Siege.

An Expreſs from the Baron de Tahiman, which has been long expected, has brought Advice to the Imperial Court, that the Baron, together with Sir Everard Fawkener and Mynheer Kalkoen, the Ambaſſadors of England and Holland, had accompany'd the three Turkiſh Plenipotentiaries to Haillſchan, upon the River Nieſter, where they ſtaid till the Place of Congreſs was intirely fixed, and till they had an Account of the Arrival of the Ruſſian Plenipotentiaries in the Ukraine. They add, that the Grand Viſier, who with the chief Turkiſh General Officers is at Bender, intends to ſtay there during the Courſe of the future Negotiation.

The Abbat Fitz James, Brother to the Duke of Berwick, arriving from Paris at Rome, took up his Lodging at the Palace of the Chevalier de St George, had Audience next Day of the Pope, when he kiſs'd his Toe, and had a Preſent from his Holineſs of a Crucifix, and ſeveral Medals and precious Stones, ſome of which were ſet in Gold; and he proceeded afterwards to Naples to ſee the Duke his Brother. We are told, that while his eldeſt Son was at Genoa, Mr. Barrington, the Engliſh Conſul, narrowly watch'd all Perſons that came to and from him; that ſeveral Engliſh Papiſts who went to ſee him kiſs'd his Hand, and could not refrain expreſſing their Affection by Tears; and that tho' he was very well convinced of their Zeal for him, 'twas obſerv'd, that he was ſo cautious, as not to let a Word eſcape that border'd upon the Title which he aſſumes at Rome, of Prince of Wales.
